./maildir/arnold-j/deleted_items/397.:90:In a press release Monday, a law firm representing the unnamed shareholder said that Enron's board lost over $35 million by allowing Fastow to run these partnerships, which engaged in transactions with Enron and presented a conflict of interest.

./maildir/arnold-j/deleted_items/397.:126:NEW YORK, Oct. 22 /PRNewswire/ -- An Enron (NYSE: ENE) shareholder has filed a derivative suit in Texas state court which charges that Enron's board of directors breached their fiduciary duties to the Company by allowing its CFO, Andrew Fastow to create and run certain limited partnerships. The Enron board lost the Company over $35 million by allowing Fastow to run these partnerships, which engaged in transactions with Enron and presented a clear conflict of interest for the Enron CFO.

./maildir/arnold-j/deleted_items/397.:233:The partnerships were set up two years ago, and while the company maintains that they are perfectly proper, some have suggested that it is a conflict of interest for Enron's chief financial officer to be involved in a partnership that was looking to purchase Enron assets, the Journal reported.

./maildir/arnold-j/deleted_items/397.:237:A law firm representing the unnamed shareholder said in a prepared statement that Enron's board lost over $35 million by allowing Mr. Fastow to run these partnerships, which engaged in transactions with Enron and presented a conflict of interest.

.//maildir/baughman-d/deleted_items/169.:49:The Times also reports (link requires registration) that Democrats are complaining of a "significant conflict of interest," in the words of one Dem consultant, because White House economic adviser Lawrence

Lindsey, who received a $50,000 consulting fee from Enron before joining the administration, conducted a study for the White House, beginning in mid-October, on the effects of a prospective Enron collapse on the overall economy. The most amusing part of this story, though, is the final two paragraphs:

//maildir/baughman-d/deleted_items/199.:37:Allison seems to be complaining that Enron's campaign contributions did influence the administration--by making it impossible for it to help without creating the appearance of a conflict of interest. But wait. Haven't self-proclaimed ethics watchdogs been telling us for decades that it's a public official's duty to avoid the appearance of conflict of interest? Besides, there's no actual evidence that the administration ignored Enron's entreaties for any reason other than the merits. All we have is the appearance of an attempt to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest. We doubt this pretzel is going to choke President Bush.

//maildir/dasovich-j/deleted_items/226.:23:In recent weeks, Jones has called on California Attorney General Bill Lockyer to investigate possible conflicts of interest posed by consultants hired to negotiate contracts who also owned stock in energy companies.
The state Fair Political Practices Commission is investigating the matter, and the federal Securities and Exchange Commission is also investigating whether any stocks were traded by state employees using insider knowledge. The attorney general hasn't officially said if he is investigating. Under state law, energy contracts could be void if a conflict of interest was found to exist during their negotiation.

//maildir/dasovich-j/deleted_items/226.:41:The letter, a copy of which has been obtained

Those topics include how the price of energy was calculated and whether or not energy Administration arrive at the price of energy purchased through the long-term contracts?

contracted for electricity purchases? What oversight and accountability precautions have been taken to ensure that there is no conflict of interest?."

Steve would know how to play this given Socal's position. 2, Did McKinsey check with Enron before taking this assignment from Cal? The lack of conflict of interest rules in the consultant world never ceases to amaze me. That being said, McKinsey is probably the best outfit we could hope for to take this investigation over for Cal. I'd like to be on the call to be sure our script for FERC on the neg. rate deals dovetails with what we tell these guys. Let me know when the call will be. We may know what the TW FERC order says before this conversation with McKinsey happens so lets talk again before the call. Thanks. df
